

Risk Analysis Report

On 28th of February 2019, the Symbiosis School of International Studies conducted a career counselling session with the risk analysis firm GRID91 and its Chief Executive Officer Varun Kareparambil. The objective of this session was to explain to students, the role played by geo-politics in risk analysis and to encourage students to consider it as a career option. The session covered various aspects of risk analysis including what affects risk analysis and who are the major clients of this sector. The discussion included reference to current affair examples like Pulwana attacks and the Maratha agitation and its implication on day to day business.

The session also highlighted the risk analysts' work profile and what is expected out of him. The three core areas are research, analysis and forecasting. These skills are of utmost significance in the risk analyst sector as research is needed to have the idea about problem, analysis is required to understand and interpret the situation and lastly forecasting is coming up with report of possible solutions.

The session provided good insights on risk analysis and how it is becoming a flourishing sector in India with major firms investing in it to achieve better results. As a student of International Studies, this helped broaden our perspective and awareness about the career prospects.
