Report

A two-day filmmaking workshop was conducted for the students of Symbiosis School of International Studies in October 2021. The sessions were conducted virtually on October 26 and 27, and were aimed at familiarizing students with the basics of filmmaking from ideation to execution. Sessions focussed on understanding the framing, writing a story for the screen, shooting and editing. Resources persons for this 10-hour+ workshop were professionals with industry and academic experience. Rohit James, Dr. Baidurya Chakrabarti, Chandrashekhar Sagade, and Juhi Rajwani - faculty at the Symbiosis Centre for Media and Communication spoke to the students at SSIS and inspired them to try their hand at film-making. This value-added course concluded with students creating their own short films which they were supposed to work on during the practical sessions on both these days.
